THIS edition, limited to 613 copies, was arranged, printed and bound at The Winthrop Press, 32 Lafayette Place, New York, this year of our Lord nineteen hundred and five, of which this copy is number 419 presented to

with the compliments of H. J. Sachs & Co.

PREFACE.

AT a great expenditure of time and labor, we have reprinted this most intereſting little volume—the "New York Directory for 1786," —the firſt one of its kind in our city. It was iſſued at a time when this great Metropolis of ours was ſtill in its infancy, and the reader will note with intereſt the various items of information given herein—giving the book a provincial tone and making it appear almoſt child like, when compared to the ponderous volume of today that attempts to give modern readers ſimilar information.

An accurate and truſtworthy deſcription of New York by Noah Webſter is prefixed, and the reader will doubtleſs glean from it more real knowledge of "Every-day New York" of that period, than can be gotten from any other brief treatiſe on the topic. Telling as it does, of a period ſo intereſting to Americans—the time between the recognition of the Colonies' independence and Waſhington's Preſidency —this cannot fail to charm thoſe who read its pages, and the thorough diſſimilarity between the quaint old Dutch town of 120 years ago and the New York of our day, will always intereſt reſidents who have watched its growth and expanſion even in their own time.

It is the hope of the publiſhers that this work will be prized for the intrinſic value of its contents, and for its old ſtyle of typography, and that it may prove an addition to any library.

DESCRIPTION OF NEW YORK

By NOAH WEBSTER

THIS city ſtands on the South-weſt point of an iſland, at the confluence of the Hudſon and Eaſt-River. The principal part of the City lies on the Eaſt ſide of the iſland; altho the buildings extend from one river to the other. The length of the City, on the Eaſt River is about two miles; but falls much ſhort of that diſtance on the banks of the Hudſon. Its breadth, on an average, is nearly three-quarters of a mile; and its circumference may be four miles.

The plan of the city is not perfectly regular, but is laid out with reference to the ſituation of the ground. The principal ſtreets run nearly parallel with the rivers. Theſe are interſected, tho not at right angles, by ſtreets running from river to river. In the width of the ſtreets, there is a great diverſity. Water-ſtreet and Queen-ſtreet, which occupy the banks of the Eaſt-River, are very conveniently ſituated for buſineſs, but they are low and too narrow; not admitting, in some places, of walks on the ſides for foot-paſſengers. Broad-ſtreet, extending from the Exchange to City-hall, is ſufficiently wide. This was originally built on each ſide of a creek, which penetrated almoſt to the City-hall. This ſtreet is low, but pleaſant; and that part which did not ſuffer by the fire during the war, is generally well built; the other is recovering from its ruins.

But the moſt convenient and agreeable part of the city is Broadway. This ſtreet runs upon the height of land between the two rivers, beginning at the fort, near the South end of the city, and extending to the Hoſpital, in front of which it opens into an extenſive plain or common. This ſtreet is wide, and elevated ſo as to command a delightful proſpect of the town, and the Hudſon.

Wall-ſtreet is generally wide and elevated, and the buildings elegant. Hanover-ſquare and Dock-ſtreet, are conveniently ſituated for buſineſs, and the houſes well built. William-ſtreet is alſo elevated and convenient, and is the principal market for the retailing of dry goods. Many of the other ſtreets are pleaſant, but moſt of them are irregular and narrow.

The houſes are generally built of brick, and the roofs tiled. There are remaining a few houſes built after the old Dutch manner; but the Engliſh taſte has prevailed, almoſt a century.

Upon the South-weſt point of the iſland ſtands the fort, which is a ſquare with four baſtions; within the walls of which the Governors uſed formerly to reſide. Below the fort, near the water, there is a line of fortifications of conſiderable extent, deſigned to command the entrance into both rivers. But it is queſtionable whether any number of cannon would prevent ſhips from paſſing with a favorable wind and tide; and indeed whether New York is capable of defence by land againſt a powerful marine force. The battery however, in the ſummer ſeaſon, furniſhes the citizens with an agreeable walk, which is open to refreſhing breezes from the bay.

The City-hall is a brick building, more ſtrong than elegant. It is three ſtories in height, with wings at each end, and fronts Broad-ſtreet, which affords an extenſive proſpect. The firſt floor is an open walk, except two ſmall apartments for the door-keeper and city watch. In the ſecond ſtory of the Eaſtern wing, is the Aſſembly-chamber, now occupied by Congreſs, and adorned with the following paintings: The portrait of the great Columbus, belonging to the Aſſembly of this State; a painting valuable only for its antiquity and the character of the man—the likeneſſes of the King and Queen of France, as large as the life, executed in a maſterly manner, and preſented to Congreſs by his Moſt Chriſtian Majeſty; equally valuable for the richneſs of the paintings, the dignity of the perſonages whom they repreſent, and as pledges of royal friendſhip. The likeneſs of General Waſhington, preſented by a gentleman in England; a likeneſs dear to every American, and deſtined to grace the walls of every Council chamber in the new world.

The Weſtern wing contains a room for the Council or Senate, now occupied by the Secretary of Congreſs, and another for the Mayor's Court. In the body of the houſe is a ſpacious hall for the Supreme Judicial Court.

There are three houſes of public worſhip belonging to the Reformed Proteſtant Dutch Church, one is called the Old Dutch Church, which was built in the year 1693, and rebuilt in the year 1766; and another is called the North Church, which was founded in the year 1767, and dedicated to the ſervice of God, in the year 1769. This laſt church being ruined by the Britiſh during the late war, was repaired in the year 1784, and has been uſed with the old church for the performance of divine ſervice. The middle church generally called the New Dutch Church, was built in the year 1729: it is the moſt ſpacious of the three, but was alſo ruined in the war, and is not yet fully repaired.

The people of this denomination were the firſt ſettlers of this State, and make a reſpectable part of the citizens. The church in the city is conſidered as one church or congregation, though worſhipping in different places. The charter, or act of incorporation, was granted by William the Third, in the year 1696, when Benjamin Fletcher, Eſq., was Governor of the Province. The Miniſters, Elders, and Deacons, are the body corporate, and hold conſiderable property. Many years before the war, they found it neceſſary, by reaſon of the decline of the Dutch language, to have ſervice performed in Engliſh, and had then two Dutch and two Engliſh Miniſters. Since the war, it has been performed chiefly in Engliſh, and they have at preſent only two Miniſters.

There are four Preſbyterian Churches in the city of New York. The firſt was erected in the year 1619. It was built of ſtone, and rebuilt and enlarged in the year 1748. It is eighty feet long and ſixty wide, with a cupola and bell; and ſtands in the upper end of Wall-ſtreet, the North ſide of the ſtreet, near the Broadway. The ſecond was erected in the year 1767, is a genteel brick building, thirty-three feet long, and ſixty-five feet wide, with a ſteeple not finiſhed; it ſtands on the Eaſt ſide of the green, at the head of Beekman and Naſſau-ſtreets.

The congregations worſhipping in theſe churches are connected with each other, under the care of the ſame Miniſters, who preach alternately in them, and having the ſame Elders and Deacons; their temporalities also are managed by the ſame Truſtees, incorporated under the law of the State paſſed in April 1784, capacitating religious ſocieties of every denomination to incorporate themſelves, for the purpoſes therein mentioned.

The third Preſbyterian Church was erected in the year 1768, is a genteel ſtone building, ſixty-five and-a-half feet long, and fifty-five and-a-half feet wide; and ſtands in Little Queen-ſtreet, not far from the Broadway. This church is alſo incorporated agreeably to the ſame law.

Theſe three churches were occupied by the Britiſh during the late war, as hoſpitals and barracks, and were left by them in a moſt ruinous ſituation, and have been repaired with great neatneſs, and at a very great expenſe, by their reſpective congregations, ſince the peace.

The fourth Preſbyterian church was erected in the year 1787, is a neat frame building, fifty feet long and twenty-four feet wide, and ſtands in Naſſau-ſtreet.

The Clergy of the Preſbyterian Churches of this city are maintained by the revenues ariſing from the rents of their pews.

There are three Epiſcopal Churches in New York, under one charter, which was granted the ſixth of May, 1697. Trinity Church was built in the year 1696, and at ſeveral times afterward, improved and enlarged. It was ſituated on the Weſt ſide of Broadway, in view of the Hudſon, with a ſpacious cemetery on each ſide; including the tower and chancel, it was about one hundred and forty-eight feet in length and seventy-two in breadth; and the ſteeple one hundred and seventy-three feet in height. This was ſuppoſed to be the moſt ſtately building of the kind in America, but it was deſtroyed in the fire which happened juſt after the Britiſh troops entered the city, in 1776. It is now in contemplation to rebuild it; and several thouſand pounds are already ſubſcribed for the purpoſe.

St. George's Chapel, in Beekman-ſtreet, was finiſhed in 1750. This is a neat building, formed with hewn-ſtone, and the roof tiled.

St. Paul's Chapel, in Broadway, was completed in 1766. This building, which is in itſelf elegant, is embelliſhed with a superb monument, erected by order of Congreſs and at the expenſe of the United States, to the memory of the brave General Montgomery, who fell in the attack of Quebec, December, 31, 1775.

To the foregoing may be added the following Churches:

German Lutheran	2
Roman Catholic	1
Friends' Meeting	1
Anabaptiſts	1
Moravians	1
Jews Synagogue	1

Hudſon River was firſt diſcovered in 1608, by Henry Hudſon, an Engliſhman, who ſold his claim to the Dutch. In 1614, the States General granted a Patent to ſeveral merchants for an excluſive trade on the river Hudſon. The ſame year this Company built a fort on the Weſt ſide of the river, near Albany, and named it Fort Orange. The next year a fort was built on the South-weſt point of Manhattan's, now York iſland; but the firſt ſettlers planted themſelves about two miles from this fort and built a church, there, the ruins of which, it is ſaid, are ſtill viſible, near the two mile ſtone on the public road. In this ſituation, finding themſelves inſecure during the Wars between the Engliſh and Dutch, they left this place and planted their habitations under the guns of the fort; which laid the foundation of the preſent city.

New York remained in poſſeſſion of the Dutch until 1664, when it was ſurrendered by Colonel Nicolls, who was commiſſioned by James, Duke of York, to whom his brother, Charles II, of England had made a grant of it, the ſame year. In 1667, at the peace of Breda, New York was conferred to the English, who, in exchange, ceded Surinam to the Dutch. In the war of 1673, the Dutch again poſſeſſed themſelves of New York; but at the treaty of peace, ſigned at Weſtminſter, the following year, New York was reſtored to the Engliſh, in whoſe hands it remained till the late Revolution.

While New York remained in poſſeſſion of the Dutch, it was called New Netherlands and governed by a Schout, Burgomaſters, and Schepens. From its ſurrender to the Engliſh, in 1664, to 1683, the province was ruled by Governors, appointed and commiſſioned by the Duke of York, and their council, whoſe rules and orders had the force of laws. From the laſt-named period, the people was admitted to a ſhare of the legiſlative authority. The government of the city (which was firſt incorporated in 1696), is now in the hands of a Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Council. The city is divided into ſeven wards, in each of which there is choſen, annually, by the people, an Alderman and an Aſſiſtant, who, together with the Mayor and Recorder, form the Common Council. The Mayor and Recorder are appointed annually by the Council of Appointment.

The Mayor's Court, which is held from time to time by adjournment, is in high reputation as a Court of Law. A Court of Seſſions is likewiſe held for criminal cauſes.

The ſituation of the city is both healthy and pleaſant. Surrounded on all ſides by water, it is refreſhed with cool breezes in ſummer, and the air in winter is more temperate than in other places under the ſame parallel.

York iſland is fifteen miles in length, and hardly one in breadth. It is joined to the main by a bridge called King's-bridge. The channels between Long and Staten iſlands, and between Long and York-iſlands, are ſo narrow as to occaſion an unuſual rapidity of the tides, which is increaſed by the confluence of the waters of the Hudſon and Eaſt river. This rapidity, in general, prevents the obſtruction of the channel by ice; ſo that the navigation is clear, except for a few days in ſeaſons when the weather is uncommonly ſevere. There is no baſin or bay for the reception of ſhips; but the road where they lie, in Eaſt-river, is defended from the violence of the ſea by the iſlands which interlock with each other; ſo that, except that of Rhode-Iſland, the harbor of New York, which admits ſhips of any burthen, is the beſt in the United States.

The city is eſteemed the moſt eligible ſituation for commerce in the United States. It almoſt neceſſarily commands the trade of one-half of New Jerſey, moſt of that of Connecticut, and part of that of Maſſachuſetts, beſides the whole fertile interior country, which is penetrated by one of the largeſt rivers in America, navigable one hundred and ſeventy miles. This city imports moſt of the goods conſumed between a line thirty miles Eaſt of Connecticut river, and twenty miles Weſt of the Hudſon, which is one hundred and thirty miles; and between the ocean and the confines of Canada, about two hundred and fifty miles; a conſiderable portion of which is the beſt-peopled of any part of the United States; and the whole territory contains at leaſt half a million of people, or one-ſixth of the inhabitants in the Union. Beſides, ſome of the other States are partially ſupplied with goods from New York. But in the ſtaple commodity, flour, Pennſylvania and Maryland have rivalled it—the ſuperfine flour of thoſe States commanding a higher price than that of New York.

In the manufacture, likewiſe, of iron, paper, cabinet-works, &c., Pennſylvania exceeds not only New York, but all her ſiſter States. In times of peace, however, New York will command more commercial buſineſs than any town in the United States. In time of war, it will be inſecure, without a marine force; but a ſmall number of ſhips will be able to defend it from the moſt formidable attacks by ſea.

Eight miles northward of the city, is a ſtrait between Long and York iſlands, which is, with great propriety, called Hell-gate. The paſſage is narrow, and the middle of it is obſtructed with rocks, ſo as to occaſion a moſt violent rapidity of the tides. Except at high and low water, this ſtrait is impaſſable, without a ſtrong breeze ſufficient to counteract the current, and even then the navigation is extremely hazardous. The tides which flow from the Eaſt and Weſt, meet at Frog's Point, ſeveral miles to the eaſtward of Hell-gate ; for which reaſon the ebbing and flowing are remarkably ſudden at this place. The channel at Hell-gate is deep enough for frigates, but veſſels uſually wait for high or low water, when the ſea is generally ſmooth, and the ſtrait is navigable on each ſide of the rocks.

A want of good water is a great inconvenience to the citizens, there being few wells in the city. Moſt of the people are ſupplied, every day, with freſh water, conveyed to their doors in caſks, from a pump near the head of Queen-ſtreet, which receives it from a pond, almoſt a mile from the city. Several propoſals have been made by individuals, to ſupply the citizens by pipes ; but none have yet been accepted.

The following is the character of the inhabitants of this city, drawn by a faithful hand in 1756:

"New York is one of the moſt ſocial Places on the Continent. The Men collect themſelves into weekly Evening Clubs. The Ladies, in Winter, are frequently entertained either at Concerts of Muſick or Aſſemblies, and make a very good appearance. They are comely and dreſs well, and ſcarce any of them have diſtorted Shapes. Tinctured with a Dutch Education, they manage their Families with becoming Parſimony, good Providence, and ſingular Neatneſs. The Practice of extravagant Gaming, common to the faſhionable Part of the fair Sex, in ſome Places, is a Vice with which my Countrywomen cannot juſtly be charged. There is nothing they ſo generally neglect as Reading, and indeed all the Arts for the Improvement of the Mind, in which, I confeſs, we have set them the Example. They are modeſt, temperate and charitable; naturally ſprightly, ſenſible, and good-humoured ; and, by the Helps of a more elevated Education, could poſſeſs all the Accompliſhments deſirable in the Sex. Our Schools are in the loweſt Order ; the inſtructors want Inſtruction; and through a long ſhameful Neglect of the Arts and Sciences, our common Speech is extremely corrupt, and the Evidences of a bad Taſte, both as to Thought and Language, are viſible in all our Proceedings, publick and private.

"The People, both in Town and Country, are ſober, induſtrious, and hoſpitable, though intent on Gain. The richer Sort keep very plentiful Tables, abounding with great Varieties of Fleſh, Fiſh, Fowl, and all kinds of Vegetables.

"The Inhabitants of this Colony are in general healthy and robuſt ; taller, but ſhorter lived, than Europeans ; and, both with Reſpect to their Minds and Bodies, arrive ſooner to an Age of Maturity. Breathing a ſerene, dry Air, they are more ſprightly in their natural Tempers than the People of England ; and hence Inſtances of Suicide are here very uncommon. Few Phyſicians amongſt us are eminent for their Skill. Quacks abound like Locuſts in Egypt ; and too many have recommended themſelves to a full Practice and profitable Subſiſtence. This is leſs to be wondered at, as the Profeſſion is under no kind of Regulation."—Smith's History of New York, page 211.

Admitting this be a candid repreſentation of facts, at the time it was drawn, yet many material changes have taken place which ought to be noticed.

The change of the inhabitants, by the Revolution, was conſiderable, and had ſome effect upon the general character of the citizens. Notwithſtanding, in point of ſociability and hoſpitality, New York is hardly exceeded by any town in the United States. The principal families, by aſſociating, in their public amuſements, with the middling claſs of well-bred citizens, render their rank ſubſervient to the happineſs of ſociety, and prevent that party-ſpirit, which an affectation of ſuperiority in certain families in Philadelphia, has produced in that city—a ſpirit which diſturbs or deſtroys their public amuſements, and which has given the citizens, too generally, perhaps, the reputation of being inhoſpitable.*

Several cauſes, however, have operated to diminiſh the ſociability of the citizens of New York, particularly the change of inhabitants and the loſs of property, during the ravages of war, and the unfavorable ſtate of buſineſs ſince the eſtabliſhment of peace. Theſe cauſes have had their influences in all parts of America; and perhaps as little in New York as in any other town.

It is presumed that the general character of the citizens in all our large towns, is, in some measure, formed by the manners of the prevailing sect or nation. The reserve of the Quakers in Philadelphia has been communicated to all classes of citizens, and assists in forming their general character. The neatness, industry and parsimony of the Dutch, were the characteristics of the citizens of New York, before the revolution; and will probably be visible in their manners a long time after national distinctions are lost.*

The charge of neglecting reading and the improvements of the mind, might be juſt in Smith's time, but, if juſt, it did not lie ſolely againſt the inhabitants of this city. That the Americans were formerly, and may beſt ill, behind the citizens of London, in their attention to literature and the arts, will be acknowledged, nor is it ſurprizing. Yet, no perſon acquainted with the well-bred American ladies, can charge them, generally, with ignorance; and there are great numbers in New York whoſe minds are highly improved, and whoſe converſation is as inviting as their perſonal charms.

Nor are the ſchools in this city in ſuch a deplorable ſituation as they were formerly. There are many which are kept by reputable and able men; and Columbia College affords a very favorable proſpect.

It muſt not, however, be concealed, that Smith's deſcription of the ſtate of education is now but too juſt, with reſpect to the country at large. There are ſeveral good academies in the country; but many parts are either unfurniſhed with ſchools, or the ſchools which they have are kept by low ignorant men, and are conſequently worſe than none. This remark may be extended to a large proportion of the United States.

An enquirer, who would wiſh to acquaint himſelf with the true ſtate of the people of New York, their manners and government, would naturally aſk the citizens for their ſocieties for the encouragement of ſciences, arts, manufactures, &c.? For their public libraries? For the patrons of literature? For their well-regulated academies? For their female academies for inſtructing young ladies in geography, hiſ-tory, belles-lettres, &c.? Such enquiries might be made with propriety.

The practice of phyſic, it is preſumed, is on a better footing than when Smith wrote his History. That it is capable of many improvements, in all parts of America, will hardly be denied by the faculty themſelves. There are, however, many eminent phyſicians and ſurgeons in New York ; and it is only to be regretted that there exiſts a neceſſity of going abroad for knowledge which ought to be obtained at home.

All free governments abound with lawyers. Where men have the privilege of thinking and acting for themſelves, they will involve themſelves in debt and quarrel with their neighbors. In proportion to the debts and diſputes of the people, lawyers will multiply. Of theſe, America furniſhes a plentiful growth, and New York has its ſhare. In this State, the practice of Law is conformed to the Engliſh mode ; and is, perhaps, better regulated than in the other States. The ſeveral degrees in the profeſſion—the number of critical examinations that candidates are obliged to paſs thro before they can be admitted as Counſellors in the higher courts ; together with the time of ſtudy required by the rules of admiſſion, render an acceſs to the firſt honors of the bar so difficult as to preclude ignorant pretenders to the important ſcience of law. New York can boaſt of many men eminent in a very liberal profeſſion, and which has hitherto furniſhed America with ſome of her moſt able legiſlators. It is, however, to be feared that a too rigid adherence to the forms of legal proceſs, in England, has ſometimes perplexed the road to juſtice, and prevented valuable improvements in the practice, not only of this, but moſt of the States.

On a general view of the City, as deſcribed thirty years ago, and in its preſent ſtate, the compariſon is flattering to the preſent age, particularly the improvements in taſte, elegance of manners, and that eaſy, unaffected civility and politeneſs which form the happineſs of ſocial intercourſe.

It is found, by a memorandum in one of the old Regiſters, that the number of inhabitants in the City, taken by order of the King in the year 1697, was as follows:

* It is ſaid that Philadelphia contains 50,000 inhabitants. This account must be too high. I find by actual enumeration, that in ſome towns the houſes contain nearly 9 ſouls each upon an average; but generally not more than 7; ſuppose 9 ſouls in a houſe in Philadelphia at the time this enumeration was made, viz. in March 1786, the inhabitants were but 40,500. I will allow 100 houſes for miſtake, and this will make the inhabitants 41,400.

The inhabitants of New York in 1786, were less than 23,614; for in this number are included all the people on the island. The houses were numbered and found to be 3,340. But suppose them 3,500, and the souls in each will not average 7; and this number is high enough for our towns in general.

Why should we estimate the inhabitants of Philadelphia higher than Boston and New York, the houses in which will not average 7 souls? Suppose the houses in Philadelphia to be 5,000, which is more than the real number, and 8 souls to a house, which is also more than the actual average number, and the inhabitants are on these principles, but 40,000. I cannot believe that this estimate is not too high, until I see the actual number published by authority.

In taking the number of houses in different towns, I invariably found it to fall short, at least a fifth, of the common estimate made by the most judicious inhabitants.—The American Magazine, N. Y. March, 1788.

To the Inhabitants of the City of New-York.

GENTLEMEN,

MR. FRANKS returns his ſincere thanks to his Friends and the Public, for their kind and liberal encouragement towards his publication of the New-York Directory; he humbly requeſts they may indulgently excuſe any errors, inaccuracies, or omiſſions, which may appear, and impute them only to the local diſadvantages he laboured under, in this firſt attempt; as he intends in the future editions, he ſhall have the honour of annually preſenting them, to have it more in his power to be exact, correct and circumſtantial; as the number of ſubſcribers are but few (which he attributes to a want of knowledge of the utility of this production, it being the firſt of the kind ever attempted in this city;) he makes bold to call on the citizens at large, for every information, that they think will prove conducive to its future correctneſs. Their directions will be thankfully received and gratefully acknowledged by Mr. FRANKS, at his lodgings, No. 66, Broad-way, or at Mr. KOLLOCK's Printing-Office.

N. B. Mr. FRANKS has ready for Publication, a TREATISE of BOOK-KEEPING, digeſted for the inland and foreign Trade of America.----This Work, which he hopes will prove very uſeful, he would willingly ſubmit, previous to his putting it to Preſs, to the inſpection of the Gentlemen of the Mercantile Line, and will conſider himſelf much honoured if they favour him with their patronage, as he intends laying it before them at their reſpective reſidences.

☞ The NEW-YORK DIRECTORY, will, in future, be publiſhed every twentieth day of May in each Year.

DAVID FRANKS,

CONVEYANCER and ACCOUNTANT, No. 66, Broadway.

BEGS Leave to return his ſincere thanks to his friends and the public, for their paſt favours, and hopes the cheapneſs of the following will continue him their favours:

Drawing a Leaſe and Releaſe, on Parchment,	£.	1	14	0
Ditto, ditto, ditto, on Paper,		1	8	0
Ditto, a Bond, – –		0	8	0
Ditto a Power of Attorney,		0	14	0

Mr. Franks having ſerved a regular apprenticeſhip to his father, a very eminent attorney in Dublin, and having, beſides, transacted buſineſs, for ſome years, for Counſellor Franklin of ſaid city, he hopes, will entitle him to the countenance of the Gentlemen of the Law Department in this metropolis; to merit whoſe eſteem and approbation, will be his particular ſtudy,--- he will thankfully receive buſineſs from them on the moſt reaſonable terms.

N. B. To prevent complaints, generally ariſing from employing unexperienced Clerks, Mr. Franks has lately engaged a young man from Dublin, of unexceptionable abilities.
